DOINGS AT HARRISBURG.

HARRISBURG, Pa., April 22, 1895.

The first step toward final adjournment has been made by the House, which passed a concurrent resolution on Thursday, naming May 23d. It is pretty generally thought that the Senate will amend to extend the time two or three weeks, fearing that the House may not be able to pass on all the Senate bills. If both branches would get down to business there would be ample time to pass all the good, and kill all the bad, measures on the calendars. The latter feat is often more difficult of accomplishment than the former. Something will be gained, however, in the direction of greater industry by the passage of a resolution to adjourn by the House, and bringing matters to a focus sooner.

The event and surprise of the past week was the passage in the House of the Judge's pension bill. It was the hottest fight that has thus far taken place. Mr. Mattox, Venango's congressional representative led in the opposition to the bill and made a vigorous protest against its adoption. He was ably seconded by his close personal friend Merrick of Tioga, both of whom threw some solid chunks of wisdom and sound judgement into the discussion in opposition to the bill. General Niles and the veteran George V. Lawrence also admonished the House in very strong logic not to establish so dangerous a precedent. Representative Poole of Union, quoted the venerable ex-Chief-Justice Agnew in opposition to the bill, and gave the substance of an interview had with that distinguished jurist on the pension bill. Mr. Herman, Snyder county's thoroughly independent and bright young Representative, also gave the bill some hard knocks. Mr. Ritter, father of the bill, defended his measure vigorously, and Speaker Walton took the floor for half an hour and with all the force at his command pleaded for the passage of the bill.

It may be said right here that all the support which the measure had, outside of Philadelphia and Allegheny counties, which were solidly for it, was due to the personal efforts of the speaker, and it passed by a vote of 107 to 77. It is thought by some that the Senate may kill it, but that is not at all probable, and it is altogether likely that Governor Haunting will have an opportunity to attach or withhold his signature to the bill long before the session closes. Outside of Philadelphia and Pittsburg it is safe to say the people of Pennsylvania are solidly arrayed against this most dangerous and un-American proposition, and it will be interesting to note how those country members who were wheedled into casting their votes for it, will explain their action when they come face to face with their constituents, who are struggling for an existence, and none of whom will ever reap any of the benefits of the $4000 and $8000 retirement chunks that fall into the laps of this new list of pensioners. The party may be able to carry this load and it may not.

The friends of pure better were thoroughly in evidence on Thursday, when two of the oleomargarine repeal bills were called up on second reading. Very little speech-making was indulged in, only a few, who were anxious to "get on record," taking advantage of the occasion to relieve themselves of their pent up oratory. Neither of the bills ever had the ghost of show of passing, there being upward of a hundred votes against them when the yeas and nays were called.

After a lively scrimmage on Wednesday the House passed on second reading what is known as the Smith bill, providing for an equitable method of distributing the State school appropriation, but it is going to take some fine engineering to pull the bill through on final passage. The measure provides that one-third of the appropriation is to be distributed according to the number of schools in each district, the other two-thirds as now—based on the number of taxables. The large cities and more thickly populated counties lose by the proposition, while the smaller gain largely. For instance, Philadelphia loses something like $129,000; Allegheny county about $40,000, and a number of others in like proportion. To be exact, seventeen counties—Allegheny, Bucks, Carbon, Chester, Cumberland, Dauphin, Delaware, Lackawanna, Lancaster, Lehigh, Luzerne, Montgomery, Montour, Northampton, Northumberland, Schuylkill and Philadelphia, lose all the way from $213 to $129,000, while the other fifty counties gain. Forest county's share of the increase under this bill being $3490. But the 17 counties which are affected adversely, unfortunately have the most votes, and unless some of them can be won over it is going to be an up-hill job to pass the bill. Representative Smith of Bedford is the father of the bill and his efforts to pass it are being vigorously seconded by other members from the country whose counties will be the gainers. A special order has been granted for the bill next week and the fight will be a hot one.

Speaking of "special orders," the House was in a good mood for granting them on Friday last, when something like fourteen were asked and obtained. A number of the Allegheny delegation voted for the Smith bill special order for the sake of their "greater Pittsburg" bills, which were among the favored on Friday, and will come up this week. It is expected that a number of them will vote for the Smith bill in order to keep down opposition to the Greater Pittsburg and it is hoped by this method to pass this bill. Of course, Philadelphia is making a big kick, but she is not in position to do much on that line for the reason that all her legislation is still to be acted on, and this legislature is in danger of getting very unruly.

On Tuesday of last week the House passed finally nineteen bills. During the balance of the week a large number passed the second reading stage, and a new order of things goes into effect for this week it is expected there will be more work accomplished than on any previous week, unless the "special orders" should hinder, which they will undoubtedly, to some extent. Two sessions will be held on Fridays hereafter, according to the new rule.

The legislature went in a body after adjournment on Friday last to visit the University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia. The members were shown about the immense buildings and grounds until five o'clock in the evening, when a nice lunch was served, to which ample justice was done, and the balance of the evening was spent in speech-making.

The institution wants an appropriation of considerable size, but according to administration figures there is going to be no more money than is needed for actual running expenses, and it is just possible this institution, though grand and worthy, will be left out of the list this year.

Road legislation is rather slow in coming on, and the prevailing opinion seems to be that nothing new in that line will be carried through the session. What suits one section of the State meets with a cold shoulder from the other. And so it goes. There is one bill on the calendar which, if enacted into law, would allow each county to legislate and pass on its own hook, so far as road matters are concerned. This might be the best plan after all, but it don't seem to meet with any greater favor than the other propositions.

There seems to be a decided change of opinion on the matter of cutting down the school appropriation, and those who were quoted as having agreed to the proposition have made haste to get in out of the wet. There may possibly be a small cut on this fund, but it will be after every other appropriation, charitable and otherwise, has been lopped off. J. E. W.

UNDER the rules of the party the Republican State Convention will not be held this year earlier than the third Wednesday in August. This rule applies only to the years in which neither President or Governor is elected. The third Wednesday of August this year will be the 21st day of the month, but it is probable the convention will be held a week later than that. This will be late enough to enable every county to combine the election of State delegates with the nomination of candidates for county offices without changing the usual time for such conventions. When the State Conventions are held early in the spring many counties are compelled to hold two conventions, an early one for the election of delegates and a later one for the nomination of county candidates. This entails considerable expense which will this year be avoided.

Office of THE PIONEER PRESS COMPANY, C. W. HORNBICK, Supt. St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 7, 1894. Eureka Chemical and Mfg Co., LaCrosse, Wis. Dear Sir—I have been a tobacco fiend for many years, and during the past two years have smoked fifteen to twenty cigars regularly every day. My whole nervous system became affected, until my physician told me I must give up the use of tobacco for the time being, at least. I tried the so-called "Keely Cure," "No-To-Bac," and various other remedies, but without success, until I accidentally learned of your "Baco-Curo." Three weeks ago to-day I commenced using your preparation, and to-day I consider myself completely cured. I am in perfect health, and the horrible craving for tobacco, which every inveterate smoker fully appreciates, has completely left me. I consider your "Baco-Curo" simply wonderful, and can fully recommend it. Yours very truly, C. W. HORNBICK.
